

4. Employment: In chronological order, list all places and dates of self-employment in the practice of law, and the names and addresses of each employer and dates of employment in the practice of law or law-related work (e.g., law teacher, law clerk or research attorney with a court.)

5. Appellate law activities:

(a) State and describe the percentage of your professional time presently devoted to actual appellate practice.

(b) State and describe the percentage of your professional time presently devoted to appellate law-related matters (e.g., teaching, writing, lecturing, committee work).

(c) Relate the history of your involvement in appellate work, describing the nature and extent of your past appellate practice and appellate-law related activities.

6. Appellate cases handled as lead counsel: To be considered for Academy membership, you must have handled 25 appellate cases as lead counsel and presented oral argument in 15 cases. List on separate pages all appellate cases (appeals or writs) in the California or federal appellate courts in which you were the lead counsel for a party as defined in the Academy's Constitution Article 3, Section 1(b)(i). This means that you personally (1) read or directed the review of the record on appeal, (2) performed or directed the principal legal research, and (3) were the principal author of all the briefs. State the case name and number, court, date of decision or settlement, and official and unofficial citations (if any) to each case. If you were involved in other appellate cases (e.g., where you were not lead counsel or wrote an amicus brief), you are welcome to describe the nature and extent of that work separately.

7. Publications: Provide citations to all of your appellate related publications.

8. Non-appellate law activities: If you wish, you may describe the nature and extent of your past and present law practice and law activities not related to appellate law, and provide citations to publications.

9. Discipline: Have you been professionally disciplined, either publicly or privately, by any court or by the bar of any jurisdiction, or sanctioned for the filing of a frivolous appellate matter or the frivolous opposition to any appellate matter? If so, explain.

10. Examples of your appellate briefs: Please submit five sets of copies of all the briefs you wrote and all other documents that were filed in the appellate courts (i.e., all briefs, petitions for writs and answers, petitions for rehearing, review and certiorari and answers and additional briefs on the merits thereto submitted by all parties, and written court opinions) in each of three different appellate cases (appeals or writs) in which you were the lead appellate counsel and in which a final decision has been rendered. We need five complete sets of copies for distribution to our membership committee.

The three cases should be closely contested and as recent as possible. They should include at least one case in which your client was the appellant or writ petitioner. Finally, the briefs you submit should reflect your personal work to the maximum extent possible. Where additional law firms or members of your firm appear on the caption along with your name, please explain the nature of your personal contribution to the document.
